THE PINE CONE

I'd like to have an I.Q. test with you sometime (to see who's smarter) Go to college and always learn or else the "ability to learn" will be worse than useless to you — it'll be a curse.

Ominously,

Mary Anne Clegg

P.S. Don't forget Jean Ho'd says I was born with a dictionary in my mouth.

MAC

Dear Carol,

Heres wishing you all the success life can offer. Finish school and go to college because you've got brains that I haven't.

Love Always,

Carolyn

Foreword

The aim of the 1950 PINE CONE staff has been to present a record of achievements. With long hours of work and fun behind us we offer you a picture of the student life of G.H.S. -- our class -- our work -- our play.

This being our first annual, we hope it will be a possession worth cherishing. With deep appreciation for the cooperation we have received, we present this volume one--The 1950 PINE CONE.

The Staff

Dedicated To . . .

Mrs. Allean D. Meador

Only occasionally do we find an individual possessing the rare combination of teacher and true friend. Mrs. Meador has endeared herself to countless students, friends and acquaintances by her generosity wisdom and understanding.

Because of her leadership, patience and guidance, plus her faithful service to our school, we affectionately dedicate this annual to her.

Mr. Iliac Reveals The Future

On a lazy day in the early summer of 1960, I sat dreaming under a palm tree, sipping a cool, refreshing soda, when my reveries were interrupted by a whizzing sound. Thinking first it was some sort of insect, I paid no heed. Then, suddenly, the whizz returned, quite nearer. When I looked up, there sat before me a jetship, and out of it climbed a short, wrinkled man. As he approached me, I gazed in bewilderment, but he said, "Don't be frightened---I'm Dr. Iliac, Professor of things to come. At present, I'm on my way to Greenwood School. Noticing you had nothing to do, I thought you might care to join me on my trip. Shall we go?"

At first, I hesitated, thinking I'd be shocked at what I might see. But after remembering how close in friendship our class was, I decided I would like very much to see my classmates of 10 years ago. So, I climbed into his super airmachine, and waved goodbye to McBryde's taxi stand which had been moved to Paradise Island where I now lived with Johnny.

Naturally, our first destination was Lee County. I settled back in my airfoam cushioned seat, I glanced below me and beheld green pastures with gleamy, white barns. I knew I had never seen farms on this island before, so I asked the Professor about it. How surprised I was when he told me we were over Lee County already and the scene I saw below was the dairy of Early Douglas.

Realizing then, how very fast we traveled, I began looking for more signs of my Sanford friends. And sure enough, at Central High, the Lee County consolidated school, we found a tall, handsome Biology teacher. I knew at once, it was Wallace Gaster, and I knew, too, he had no trouble in teaching Biology, even without a college education! Not far away, on a neat farm with a cozy cottage, I spied Jack Atkins rocking a baby, while Mrs. Atkins, (Doris) was seen feeding the stock and milking the cows.

In route to Sanford, we noticed a modern lustron house, spreading over several acres. Upon investigation, we found Curt Bullard reading funny books in his den. When we asked what he did now, he said he was the Coach at Deep River School for the Insane. We inquired about his wife, Chris, and he told us she was cashier at Belk's Department Store, saving her earnings for house payments. As we left, we noticed fine husky boys. Yes! Mr. Bullard had a basketball lteam of his own.

It being a rather sultry day, we became thirsty, and so we alighted on Steele Street in Sanford to have a soda. Into Rimmer's Drug Store we went, and who should serve us in our glass booths, but Helen Layne.

Well, we boarded our plane and left Sanford, going north. As we passed over Washington, we noticed a crowd around the White House, so down we went. In the midst of the crowd, we heard "Boos". We asked a passer-by what the commotion was about and his answer was: "Jack Key". "But why?", we asked. "Oh, didn't you know?", he answered. "Jack has been U. S. Treasurer for five years and today the President found a shortage of some two million dollars"! This news was a bit depressing, but I didn't exactly blame Jack. He's inexperience at Greenwood, I felt, was partly to blame.

My spirits were brightened however when we reached Baltimore, for there, at John Hopkin's Hospital, we saw a true "Angle of Mercy". Yes---Mary Frances was superintendent of Nurses and the idol of all her patients. We found another classmate in the famous hospital. Another nurse? No, a mother with her newborn son. It was Jenny Blue. And beside her bed sat Lynn, tired from pacing the floor.

Going from Baltimore to the Metropole's of the East---New York, we decided to rest our minds and eyes by taking in a Broadway production. We had much trouble in securing tickets, for there were crowds at the box office to see the world premiere. As soon as we got close enough, we saw in neon signs, "Gone With the Rain", starring the new Broadway success, Marvelene Gilmore. It seems her legs were her fortune.

After the show, we headed west, by way of Detroit, and there at River Rouge we saw Leonard Rogers; Manufacturer of the new wreck-proof Roger car. We learned he took over Mr. Ford's business a few years ago. Leonard told us to visit Earl Bardsher, too, who was just across the line in Canada, so we ventured over into the wild woods. Sure enough, we found Earl in his huge furniture factory. I remembered his first product---a revolving bed, and now he was manufacturing his latest---a garbage can, equipped with a mechanical digestor and dispenser. I was really proud of Earl's ingenuous mind.

Well, we started to the great glamour capital of the world, Hollywood. As I waited for our landing, I found an old copy of Sports, Inc. and who should appear on the cover but "Chug, Chug Cox" who had just made All-American. Upon reading farther, I learned he had a beautiful wife and child.

In Hollywood at last, we saw Wayne Roberts, comedian, who was now seen on television over station F.L.O.P. He had also starred in pictures, with Bing Crosby, but decided to stick to radio since he felt his talent was too far superior for amateurs! As we talked to Wayne, who should walk up but an unshaven, ragged, but nevertheless handsome, Le Vaughn Bullis. He was sweeping cigarette butts from Wayne's Studio. Such luck---and Le Vaughn had such confidence in himself.

After our interesting stay in sunny California, we sailed out over the bonnie blue Pacific and steered toward the jungles of darkest Africa to a small colony of ignorant natives. And of course, who should be in their midst but the Missionary, Wilton Medlin, trying vainly to teach French to the native girls.

Still deeper into the jungles we advanced, but in a clearing we saw a small workshop. "This," said the Professor, "is the shop of Johnny Stanley". I was really pleased to learn that the class of 1950 made a scientist out of at least one member. Upon inquiry from Johnny, we learned his latest experiment was imbreeding to get a speckled gorilla.

We left the torrid climate of the equator and sailed toward the milder region of the blue Mediterranean. And there we beheld a magnificent estate, overflowing with palaces. As we lowered our plane we saw hundreds of beautiful, glamourous, women, clothed in exquisite clothes. Some were swimming in the sea, others were lounging on the lawns, and still others were strolling through spacious gardens. Upon landing, I noticed still another group gathered around a sparkling throne. Well, I couldn't believe my eyes, but upon that throne sat Gene Fraley. At last his dream had come through---he had become a successor to Prince Ala Khan and now had all the beautiful women of the world in his own private harem.

"Well, Professor", I said, "I think I've seen enough to keep my thoughts occupied for many years. I'm ready to go back to my comfortable home on the island".

"But wait, Betty Jean", he said, "we have failed to look in on a most important member of your class. We still have time to take a trip before your evening meal. So I wearily gave in, and sank back to close my eyes for a few winks on our last visit.

Thus, when I opened my eyes I viewed a scene of ice and snow.

"Where are we, Professor," I asked sleepily?

"In Alaska", he said.

Sure enough, I recognized Eskimos and dog sleds. When we landed on the ice strip, the Professor led me to a huge building. As we entered, I smelled the aroma of fish, and I noticed a tall blonde working in one corner.

"Doris Johnson!" I exclaimed.

""Yes," said the Professor, "she has revolutionized the woman's world by making nylons out of whale blubber.

After I congratulated her, we left the building for our plane, and as I looked back, I noticed the name of her shop was the "Steady-Eddy Blubber Shop".

So again, we boarded our plane and flew home. When the Professor left me, I thanked him for my unusual trip and I returned to my spot under the tree. All at once, Johnny tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Betty Jean, wake up, it's almost dark, you've been asleep for hours."
